MR. ROLAND YODER

Interesting pieces of art work, the atmosphere of a palace garden for our Junior-Senior Banquet, and the redecorated office are the evidence of your artistic talent. Your interest in science is not only shown in the classroom, but also by your promotion of the Audubon Lecture Series. For our class you have sacrificed much time and energy, for which we shall always be grateful.

So, to you, Mr. Yoder, we, the class of 1967, dedicate our yearbook in appreciation for the interest you have shown in us.

GRADUATION 1966

Beth Brenneman, president of the senior class, receives the prize for the highest class average for Work Day and also special congratulations for the fine record the class holds from Don Schmidt, president of Student Council. This class has been the winner of every Work Day since the freshman year.

On May 21, 1966, the cafeteria was decorated to look like a Russian palace garden for the annual Junior-Senior Banquet. An elegant Russian palace reflected on the wall, created a picturesque backdrop for the garden. After the seniors were served a complete Russian meal, the juniors presented the play ANASTASIA, written by Guy Bolton.

Ruth Rice and Richard Landes, our charming hostess and host.

"It's official . . . The Prince sent for me to ask if Her Highness was now well enough for us to bring her to Heraldeburg to meet the Empress."

Six heads are better than one . . . sometimes.

"Where has she gone? Does Your Majesty know?"

Triumphant Curtain Call.

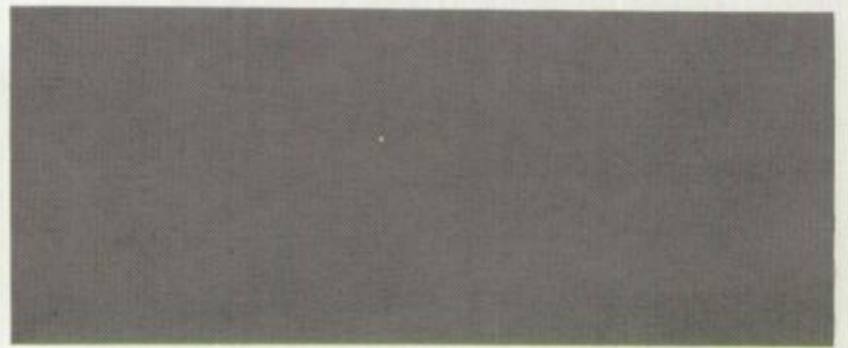

"Look! . . . It draws her like a magnet!"

"Look, here is the first one—your mother, Queen Alexandra."

"I am not going back to Bucharest. I have made up my mind to that in the past few days."
